

Provisions for Care and Protection of Device Innovation

Paris Samuel Miles-Brenden

June 30th, 2017

First and foremost the decision to leave my patent remaining as is and not under official protection is a granted and guaranteed right through which it must remain as not produced; replicated; or reproduced; or published otherwise as a creative work of artistry. As the given truth aforementionedly it is true that given the capacity of hardware backward compatibility of the device; it is impartially affixed to that of current technology; for a method exists to alter the virtual notion of currently designed and future designed technology; of a particular nature leading to a pre-action of technology on human society; and this is undesirable additionally as that of the given device in standing would be; if replicated (for which there exists no known method); diminished in potential to exist with a passive and articulated capacity of virtual and positive implementation; as it would then lose utility; and it would reach an ever diminishing capacity with eventual expiry; violating it's own innovation and the capacity to through innovation; possess an alterable purpose as designed.

This creative aspect can be turned into a positive aspect when it is understood that the other side of the given relation is to understand that for what has an expiry date of thousands of years into the future; if not millennia for what is of it's virtual instantiation; and physical instantiation meeting as one; it is true that such a principle as the aforementioned "Quantum" in ever existent and eternal; appears and disappears in a moment; singular and undefined; for what is understood as that of a method for which only prevention will curtail that of the given reverse hardware compatibility by the method of a single interference of physically created hardware of various natures; one of which is virtual and one of which is physical; for two separations of the principle that is: A physical and electrical device can be curtailed by that of either of two obstacles for which one similar capacity is found; and two devices standing at finite displacement of measure apart; for that of either side of it's self involution of creative and virtual implementation. This ceases, halts, and disables false creative action; and yet does not disable the proper purposes of the device.

As a consequence it is necessary to keep at bay any published work of this design; and through which these methods can be found that of a given proper purpose of the device; which is to act under eventualities so as to free choice of relation for that of expression and articulation; with that of the activity to separate; convolve; and return normalized distributions upon a spectrum to one another; as of the nature to account for that of either a given or a sent message; from place to place; which without accompaniment is to be aligned upon immomentary and indivisibly subtle characteristic apart from that of either end colliding; as to maintain suspense of either given end of the relation of physical; written; and virtual implementation; in balance and as a given one return under either relation throughout; for that of an eventuality of self discovery; the purpose under which is a given closure and opening of channels of awareness undivided without circumscription with respect to future pretense and as a guide of which is personable and personal association to be met as a carrier for that of what is to be found as of yet; a conveyance by which humanity may reach a new pedestal of accomplishment beyond which sights unseen are yet to be found.

The given truth then is that either future pretense is a free open choice with each; and when presented with a solid and open relation of choice there is the capacity of virtual awareness by that of what is exclusively the freeing of choice as into the domain of non choice made ever more dense.